TEXTO

BRAZIL WELCOMES YOU

On 2nd October 2009 the beginning of a new era was definitely sealed for Brazil. The city of Rio de Janeiro was chosen host city of the 2016 Summer Olympic Games, which will be held for the first time in South America.

The announcement brought tears to both football legend Pele and the Brazilian president at that time, Lula da Silva, who said repeatedly during the press conference afterwards: "Our time has arrived". The celebration erupted in Rio at the world-famous Copacabana beach, where thousands of Brazilians gathered to follow the announcement.

The infrastructure developments for the preparation of the games are huge. There will be more than 100,000 people directly involved in the organization of the games, including 70,000 volunteers. Millions of people in the city, around the country and across the continent of South America will be reached and inspired by the games. More than 10,500 athletes from approximately 205 nations around the world are expected to go to the Rio 2016 Olympic Games, to compete in front of many thousands of media professionals, sports fans and tourists from all over the globe. Besides these 2016 Summer Olympic Games, Brazil is also hosting the 2014 FIFA World Cup.

Both 2014 FIFA World Cup and 2016 Summer Olympic Games will bring countless opportunities for the Brazilian people. In order to accommodate all the visitors attending these events, Rio will undertake a transformation over the forthcoming years, but the 'marvellous city' will never lose its Carioca spirit and Brazilian energy it is famous for.

- E. Probably something sport-related. I did sport at college and I always thought maybe I could be a PE teacher or something like that.
